

Weaving Communities Together for Healing

Weaving Communities Together is a project of the Nevada Coalition to End Domestic and Sexual Violence Native American and Indigenous Initiative. Our goal is to bring together community domestic and sexual violence agencies, native services agencies and community stakeholders to bridge conditions that limit our abilities to provide services to all domestic and sexual violence survivors.

Join us for a virtual two-part series to explore the foundations of culturally appropriate victim-survivor centered services with a focus on domestic violence, addictions and healing.

Training Series: Register Here

- Session 1: Historical trauma, cultural considerations with non-tribal versus tribal services, and how to build community of services with each other.
- Session 2: Domestic violence, its effects on the families in native communities and merging our collective next steps.

Trainer: Avis Garcia, Ph.D

Dr. Garcia specializes in addictions treatment and work with Native Americans. Committed to addressing health disparities within Native American communities through research and clinical work, the former executive director of Pathfinder in Cheyenne Wyoming has published on trauma, substance use and integrated care
